beat the heat

Although the long days of summer fade faster than we would wish, this year you can celebrate your best season ever with Suzanne Brown's Summer: A User's Guide (Artisan, 2007). Whether you're searching for practical tips on how to repair a window screen, build a rope swing, or put your shell collection to good use, this is one reference book you won't want to live without. Parents will appreciate "50 Fun Things To Do This Summer," kids will love the outdoor activities (especially the beach ones), and everyone can enjoy the kite-flying instructions and fresh recipes—just don't let the ice cream melt while you're reading. To order, visit amazon.com.
